Fish & Game: The bear was dangerous

By PAUL MILLER

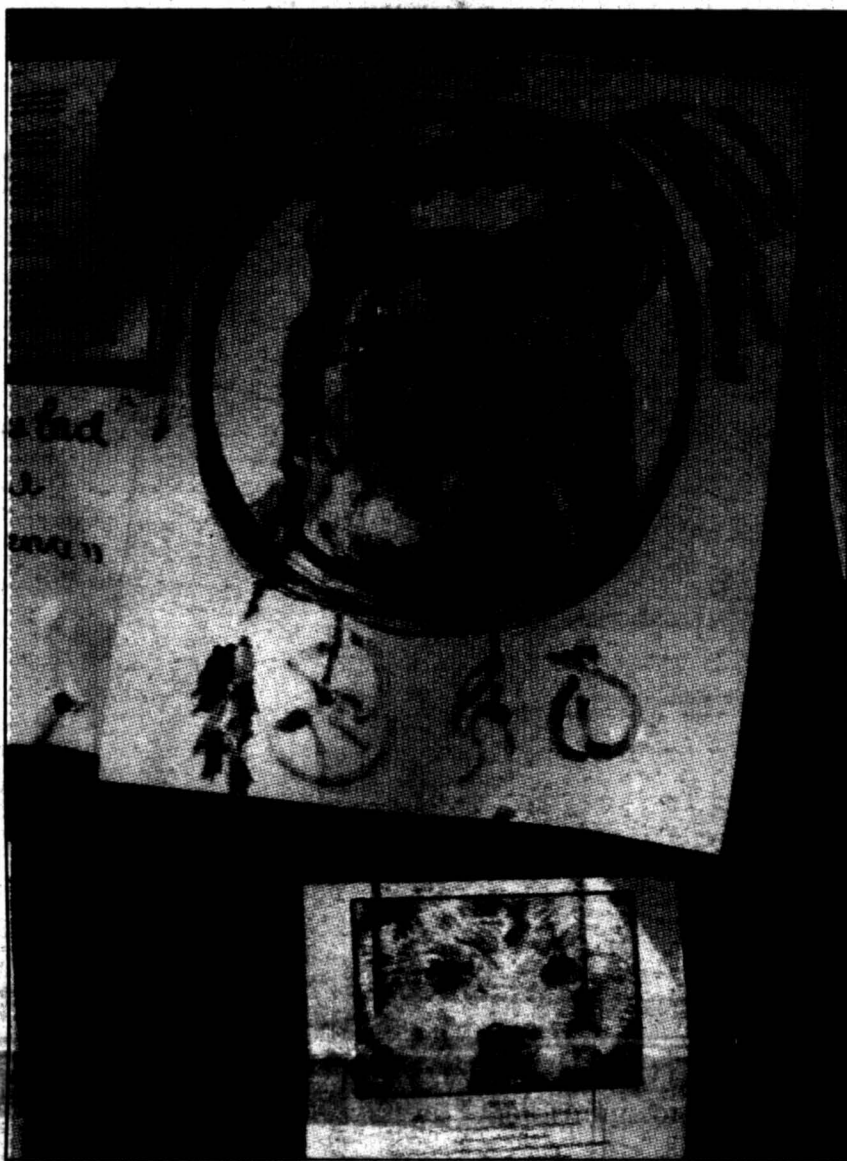

OFFICIAL REPORTS released Wednesday by the California Department of Fish and Game and the Carmel Police Department contain new details about the death of a black bear in Carmel last week — including a sighting near Robert Louis Stevenson Lower School — that wildlife officials said help explain their concern for public safety as a wild animal walked through the village.

"This was not a pet that you can walk up to and have a conversation," said Captain Doug Huckins of the central coastal division of fish and game. "Public safety was number one, and the safety of the bear — while very important — came after that."

Officials at RLS School didn't want to comment on the bear's proximity to the campus on Dolores Street, just outside the Carmel city limits. "It's a sensitive subject," one school employee said. Several parents and students said that the kids were kept in their classrooms after being advised by police the bear was nearby. In his Wildlife Incident Report dated May 29, game warden Barry J. Cecon said teachers at the school "locked the students in the classrooms Wednesday morning out of fear for their safety" as the bear made its way from Pebble Beach to Carmel.

Fish and game officials said they were waiting that morning for the bear to be shot again after it had been seen several times early in the week along Highway 68. The bear scavenged the garbage cans at one restaurant and knocked over a 55-gallon drum of cooking oil at another. "This was a bear who'd become a garbage bear," said

The tree where the bear perched before being shot with a tranquilizer dart was decorated this week with two memorial paintings which depict the bear as benign, if not friendly. Wildlife officials say it wasn't.

Comerica Bank robbed — again

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE ROBBER who fled Comerica Bank with an undisclosed amount of cash May 21 before police could nab him is suspected of having the gall to return May 29 and rob the bank again, according to Carmel Police Lt. Pete Poitras.

"The M.O. is virtually identical, so the odds are 99.7 percent that it's the same guy," he said.

Shortly before 2 p.m. Tuesday, the suspect — described as a white male in his mid-20s, 6 foot to 6 foot 2 inches tall, weighing about 160 pounds, with a thin build and dark, shaggy, shoulder-length hair — approached the bank teller and demanded money.

Although it was originally reported that the robber pretended to have a gun in the May 21 incident, the teller later said she thought she saw a carrying case for a weapon, but not the gun itself, according to police.

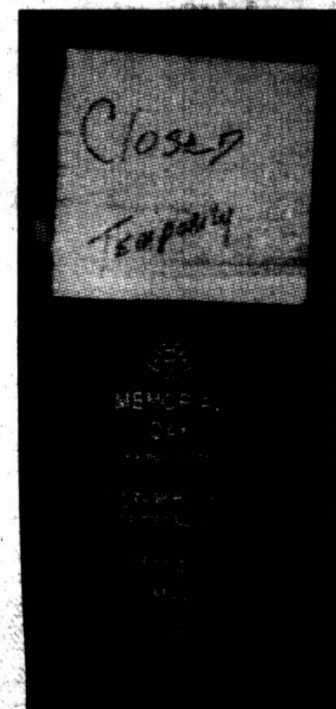

The two tellers who had been present at the May 21 robbery were again at the counter, according to Poitras.

The robber didn't show a gun at the second robbery either; Poitras said he didn't have to. "The tellers were obviously shaken by the first incident, so it was immediately apparent to them that they were being robbed," he said.

"We received an alarm and responded in two minutes, and again the individual was gone — he appeared to go in the same direction as last time," Poitras said.

Poitras said the robber got away with an amount similar to that which he stole a week ago, but would not disclose how much was stolen.

In response to the robberies, the bank has now posted a security guard in its building at Dolores and Seventh, according to Poitras.

Comerica bankers closed the Carmel branch after their second robbery in eight days.

CARMEL: COURT'S RULING MAY HURT HISTORIC PRESERVATION

By MARY BROWNFIELD

SUPERIOR COURT Judge Robert O'Farrell's decision that Carmel illegally adopted rules for proposed demolitions and renovations of older buildings could actually hinder preservation efforts in the city, according to acting planning manager Chip Rerig.

Judge Robert O'Farrell

And now that those historic preservation protocols have been thrown out, dozens of buildings — many already under construction — which were reviewed under the protocols may have to be reevaluated using the old ordinance, city attorney Don Freeman said.

In response to disagreements between the city's historic preservation committee and its planning commission on what constituted historic resources, the city council approved a resolution last May establishing the stopgap protocols until a historic preservation ordinance could be completed, Freeman told the court May 30.

But the council "unlawfully tried to amend its ordinance" by not writing a new ordinance and submitting it for environmental review, O'Farrell said.

Now that the protocols are gone, the general plan currently stipulates that only projects with buildings already designated as historic must be reviewed by the historic preservation committee, according to Rerig.

The protocols, on the other hand, were tougher: They required evaluation of any building older than 50 years.

"I think a lot of people don't understand that the ordinance is less restrictive than the protocols were," Rerig said, adding that there aren't many properties on the official list of candidates for historic designation. And since renovation or demolition of homes not on the list receive no such review under current rules, he said the ordinance is in conflict with the California Environmental Quality Act. That state law

Right-turn lane becomes reality

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

MORE THAN two years after it was approved by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors, a second right-turn lane from Carmel Valley Road onto northbound Highway 1 was opened to traffic Thursday morning.

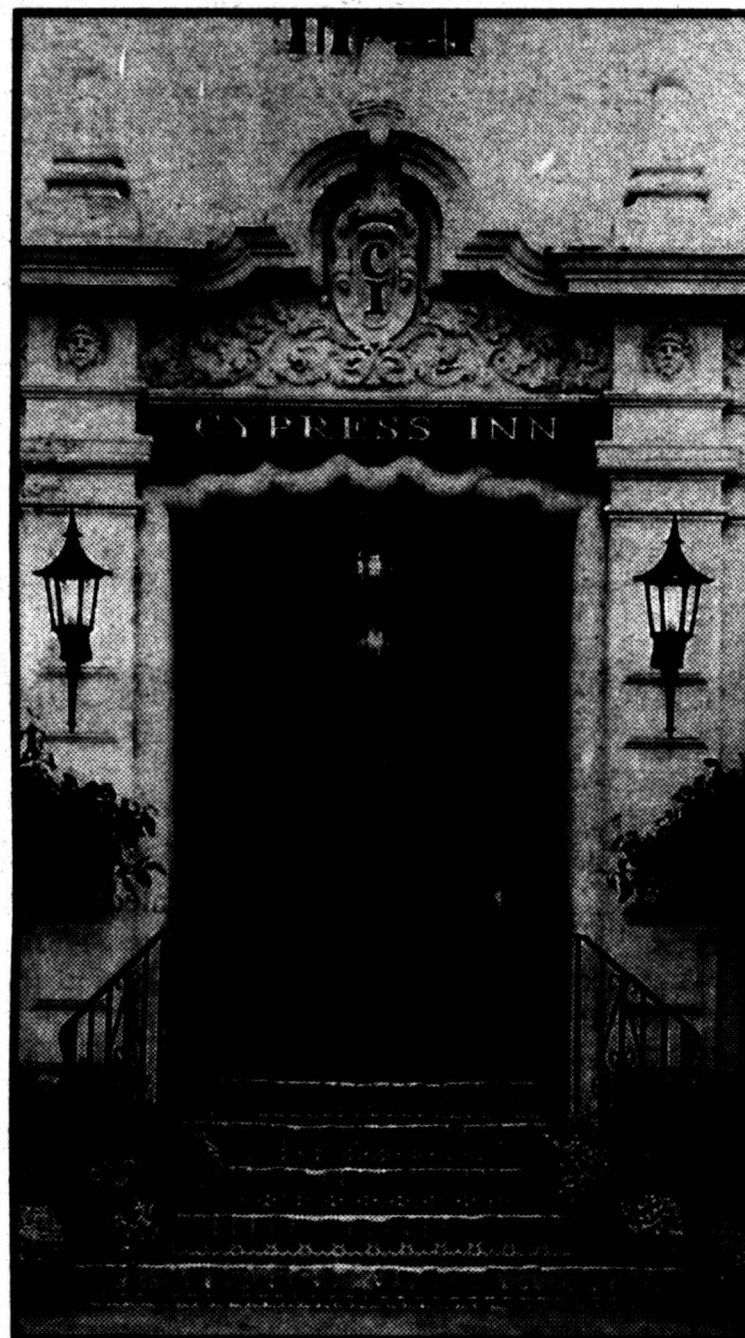

The lane — which, for now, doesn't go anywhere — will eventually feed onto a second northbound climbing lane to Carmel High School, according to a plan which supervisor Dave Potter has been pushing since the Hatton Canyon Freeway was killed in 1998.

When the right-turn lane was approved in February 1999, construction was supposed to begin that fall. It was suspended so its construction could be synchronized with that of the climbing lane, to minimize traffic tie-ups. But Caltrans decided to go ahead when the climbing lane ran into even more delays, including opposition from freeway supporters and concerns about its safety from highway experts.

The right turn project began in April with construction of a new lane on the south side of Carmel Valley Road between Highway 1 and Carmel Rancho Boulevard. Overnight Wednesday, the road was restriped, moving the traffic onto the new lane. Caltrans will also widen the north side of Carmel Valley Road and the east side of Highway 1. Completion of the turning lane project is scheduled for late June.

Funding of the climbing lane was okayed by Monterey County in April. According to Potter, a document analyzing the environmental impacts of the climbing lane is being circulated to the various government agencies involved but he would not predict when it might be built.

Big Sur man arrested for threats, sawed-off shotgun, live abalone

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

BIG SUR resident Lee Price was arrested May 27 after Monterey County Sheriff's Deputies found an illegal gun and three live black abalone in his Lafler Canyon cabin, according to Sgt. Bruce Palmer.

Deputies had gone to Price's home after his girlfriend told authorities he had threatened to kill her, Palmer said.

"When they went up to talk to him, they found a sawed-off shotgun and live abalone in his kitchen sink," he said.

Possession of a sawed-off shotgun is illegal because such a modification is made to more easily hide the weapon, a violation of the penal code, according to Palmer.

"It shortens the barrel and makes it concealable strictly so you can hide it — so you can stash it places," he said. "And if you were ever robbed at gunpoint with a sawed-off shotgun, you'd see the barrel's about the size of a two-pound coffee can."

According to California State Department of Fish and Game Code, possession of black abalone is illegal. A warden responded and reintroduced the pirated abalone into waters on the coast, according to Palmer.

The 46-year-old Price is currently being held on $3,500 bail at Monterey County Jail.

Speaking of abalone

Two Salinas brothers, Arnel and Edwin

Pajimola, were convicted by a Monterey County jury May 22 for illegally removing black abalone, mussels and sea urchins from the coast between Rocky Point and Garrapata Creek last December. Arnel Pajimola was also found guilty of delaying a peace officer in the performance of his duties when he initially fled the scene, according to the D.A.'s office.

Judge Susan Dauphine sentenced the men to fines of $3,600 each and county jail time. While Edwin Pajimola was sentenced to two days in county jail, Arnel Pajimola was sentenced to 40 days of jail time.

According to deputy district attorney David Frost, had the men been caught committing the crimes this year, their sentences would have been much heavier. New sentencing laws require mandatory fines between $15,000 and $40,000, the possibility of lifetime loss of fishing privileges, jail time and forfeiture of boats, equipment and vehicles if a suspect is found in illegal possession of 12 or more abalone.

Another species — white abalone — was declared endangered this week by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Former Congresswoman Pat Schroeder to speak here

■ She pioneered female representation on The Hill

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

FORMER CONGRESSWOMAN Pat Schroeder, a self-described "recovering politician," will be the guest speaker at this year's fifth annual Literary Feast presented by the Carmel Public Library Foundation.

Schroeder will bring her optimistic and humorous message, "There's a Woman in the House," at 2 p.m. Monday, June 11 at The Golden Bough Theater, Monte Verde and Eighth Ave., Carmel-by-the-Sea. Tickets are $30 per person.

Pat Schroeder

The same evening, from 6 to 8 p.m., a cocktail buffet at the Pebble Beach home of Dr. and Mrs. William R. Lewis will present the opportunity of those who attend to meet the former congresswoman and author. Tickets are $125 per person.

After almost a quarter of a century in Congress, Schroeder recaptured those years in what the Washington Post referred to as "a wickedly funny book," "Twenty-Four Years of House Work and the Place is Still a Mess: My Life in Politics."

A graduate of Harvard Law School, Schroeder moved to Colorado to practice law and to teach after graduation, but was elected to the 93rd Congress in 1972 and became a pioneer for female representation on The Hill and a champion of women's issues, from health care to the military.

Currently CEO of the Association of American Publishers, Schroeder champions early literacy and the protection of intellectual property rights.

The Fifth Literary Feast benefits Harrison Memorial Library.

Sharply divided water board chooses new boss

By PAUL MILLER

AFTER MONTHS of searching, the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District has a new general manager, and he's a man whose resume includes completion of a huge reservoir, held back by a 192-foot-high earthen dam, to supply water for Contra Costa County.

Ernesto Avila is chief engineer for the Contra Costa Water District, which serves 400,000 customers in several fast-growing communities east of San Francisco. The 100,000-acre-foot Los Vaqueros reservoir, designed to improve water quality for the district, was completed in 1997. It is "off-stream" — which means it is filled with water pumped from the Sacramento River 12 miles away, eliminating most of the environmental problems associated with building a dam across a river.

An "off-stream" reservoir — possibly located at Fort Ord — could be part of the solution to the Monterey Peninsula's chronic water shortage, according to water board chair Dave Potter.

"Instead of trying to build a huge dam across the Carmel River, I think smaller scale projects are the answer," Potter said. He called Avila a "results-oriented guy" who is enthusiastic about helping solve the local water shortage.

Salary, benefits opposed

Potter barely got a majority to approve Avila's three-year contract. Directors Molly Erickson, Kris Lindstrom and Alvin Edwards formed a rare bloc in opposition to Avila's hiring at a salary and benefits package worth $181,000 per year, including 30 days paid vacation.

"I will vote no because I have problems with salary and other items," Edwards said.

"Because of specific contract terms only, I will be voting no," Erickson said.

Outgoing General Manager Darby Fuerst, who took the job in 1995 after the sudden death of Jim Cofer, told the water district board last summer that he wanted to return to his job as senior hydrologist instead of wrestling with politics all the time.

"While I was GM, I made less progress on the water supply than I thought I would be able to," Fuerst told The Pine Cone. "But I'm happy I had the opportunity to be exposed to the issues that I have." Fuerst said it's time for the district to move ahead on new water supply projects to eliminate illegal pumping from the Carmel River, and to supply water for lots-of-record and remodels.

Avila was selected by the board from more than 100 candidates during a nine-month screening process. He didn't respond to calls seeking comment about his new job.

Poet Robert Linn sets sail from Linn's Landing at age 90

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

A CARMEL-by-the-Sea poet embodied in haiku the loneliness following a loved one's death:

*I stop and wonder when I see a trembling leaf.
Did you go this way?*

Such was Robert Hughes Linn's great gift for creating transcendent poetry that touched the heart.

"Bob" Linn died last week on Tuesday, May 22. He led an adventurous and even dangerous life until he retired to Carmel-by-the-Sea in 1971 at "Linn's Landing," his Carmel cottage on Torres, where he spent the next 30 years steadily writing poetry, short stories, essays and novels.

Mr. Linn was born on Groundhog Day — as he liked to tell his friends — in 1911 in a blizzard at Kenmare, North Dakota. At the age of six, Mr. Linn moved to Berkeley, where his father worked at the university and later became superintendent of schools in Fresno County.

Following in his father's footsteps, Linn, after graduating from the University of the Pacific in Stockton, entered the field of education, teaching English in Fresno and Napa schools.

After a hobo-freighter trip to Japan in 1931, Linn wrote a short story, "The Intrigue of Mr. S. Yamamoto," which was published in "Best Short Stories of 1937," and a Mexican story, "You Gotta have Pants" published in Story Magazine.

On a summer trip to Italy, he met and later married Alberta Sammartino.

He continued teaching until WWII, when he became a Navy Japanese language officer after studying Japanese at the University of Colorado. He served in that capacity in New Guinea, Morotai and the Philippines from 1942 until 1947.

In 1948 Mr. Linn joined the U.S. State Department as a foreign service officer, serving in India, Japan, Egypt and Vietnam. As Assistant Naval Attaché in Bangkok, he traveled to Angkor Wat, Saigon and to Hanoi where he interviewed Ho Chi Minh.

From 1949 to 1952, Mr. Linn was at the U.S. Consulate in Calcutta where he met with the Dalai Lama's mother, and tried, unsuccessfully, to get the Dalai Lama out of Tibet. From 1954 to 1956 he was with the U.S. Embassy in Tokyo and was later posted to Jordan, Cairo, Saigon, Phan Thiet and to Nha Trang in the Vietnam war during the Tet Offensive.

After a divorce and retirement to Carmel-by-the-Sea, he married Sally Lewellyn in 1971. The following year, he started the magazine Poetry Shell with Lois Wilson — a magazine that was to survive for more than 20 years. Following the death of his wife, Mr. Linn was accompanied for the remainder of his life by Jadwiga Babcock, who passed away in 2000.

Mr. Linn's poems were published frequently over the years in The Monterey

Robert Hughes "Bob" Linn

Herald and in The Carmel Pine Cone. His last public reading was at The Pine Cone's Village Verse poetry evening at the Carmel Art Association in 1998. He was named Poet Laureate of the Monterey Peninsula, and although he wrote in many verse forms, the sonnet was his particular favorite. He published a book of poems, "Taj Mahal in Starlight and Other Poems" in 1989, followed by a novel of suspense and intrigue, "Journeys in the Night," set in Ceylon which he had visited while posted to Calcutta. A second book of poetry, "Swimmers in the Sky," followed.

Mr. Linn was a member of the World Affairs Council and Hubris, a dedicated poetry group. He enjoyed working in ceramics and produced a prodigious number of handsome pieces. He was an avid theater-goer.

In his later years, Mr. Linn continued to live in his home in dignity and independence where he was assisted by several caregivers who took him to movies, on car rides and visits to Carmel Beach to view the sunsets, which Mr. Linn particularly enjoyed and which he had written of many times. Holiday parties were arranged in Mr. Linn's home where he could greet his friends, and a 90th birthday party at the DoubleTree Hotel in Monterey was held in February of this year.

Mr. Linn is survived by two sons, Robert P. Linn, of Potomac, Md., and James R. Linn, of Olney, Md.

Carmel High seniors honored for community service

By HONEY HAMILTON
Class of 2001

WITH A HOST of academic achievements and many thousands of hours of community service on their resumes, a group of 65 Carmel High School students received honors for their hard work and dedication to both their school and their community Tuesday night.

In addition to certificates and trophies, the students were presented with college scholarships by businesses, service organizations and concerned citizens.

In return, students also presented checks from funds they had made while conducting senior projects during the second semester. $900 was donated to the George Mark House, $518.72 to Dorothy's Place and $911.15 was raised for the Make a Wish Foundation. In addition, through the second annual Senior Fashion Show, students raised $800 for the Monterey Rape Crisis Center.

Teacher Jack Ellena informed the crowd that this year's graduating class of 143 students had performed more than 20,000 hours of community service during their four years at Carmel High.

A four-year, all-expenses-paid scholarship to the Air Force Academy was awarded to Nathan Mintz.

Ryan Olf was named this year's valedictorian and Andrew Dahl was recognized as salutatorian. Kerry Vasquez, Ryan Olf, Andrew Dahl, Nathan Mintz and Ryan Scott were honored for their exceptional scores on the PSAT.

The musician of the year was Ryan Scott. Athletes of the year were Cole Courtney, Brent Fogg, Emily Moss and Hannah Coombe.

The students, staff and parents of Carmel High are most grateful and wish to thank the following members of the community who came forward to show their support for the young people of the class of 2001: The Carmel Masonic Lodge, Impact: Coalition for Healthy Youth, the Carmel Valley

Carmel High School principal Jan Zettel presented a National Merit Finalist certificate to Nathan Mintz, who has also earned an appointment — and a full scholarship — to attend the U.S. Air Force Academy in Colorado Springs, Colo., next year.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

St. John's Wort has received enormous popularity and publicity praising the merits of the herbal effects in the pretty yellow flower's extract as an antidepressant. However, researchers have noted that St. John's Wort interacts dangerously with two medications-cyclosporine, used in organ transplants, and protease inhibitor indinavir, used to treat AIDS. In both cases, St. John's Wort reduced blood concentrations of the drugs, making them less effective.

When the seas get rough what's a sailor to do? In the case of retired sailors Ernie Cox and Arthur Moore, they settle into the YMCA. As part of an $8.5 million renovation, the fourth floor of the facility in Brooklyn, New York has designated a wing for the retirees called "Seafarers Safe Haven." Having spent their lives on boats, these men do not want to live on their own, but prefer to live together, just as they did at sea. Days and nights together at the Y are spent reliving stories of ancient storms, bewitched ships, lost loves, and wayward captains.

Remember When? In 1906, President Theodore Roosevelt first used the term "muckraker." It was part of the speech he delivered to the Gridiron Club in Washington.

World champion motorcycle racers reign supreme in fledgling SuperKart series

By MARY BROWNFIELD

HE IS PARALYZED from the waist down because of a 1993 crash at the Italian Grand Prix, but three-time world-champion motorcycle racer Wayne Rainey was back on the track at Laguna Seca last month, racing a custom-built Yamaha SuperKart with a special seat, leg and foot restraints, roll bar and hand controls.

Awestruck spectators and longtime race fans, many of whom had once watched a young Rainey take the motorcycle racing world by storm, cheered as he tore around Mazda Raceway at Laguna Seca at speeds up to 150 mph in the fight to beat dozens of other tiny SuperKarts to the finish.

His teammate — former world champion motorcycle racer Eddie Lawson — handily won Sunday's 15-lap race, while Rainey finished fifth.

His superb finish in the souped-up go-kart came after a crash Saturday in Turn 3 when a near-collision between two other karts forced him off the track.

"I went into the grass and it busted off the left front wheel of the car," he said. He came away uninjured, but with a headache.

"My wife is wondering why I'm back doing this stuff again, putting her into the same environment as when I was racing bikes," said Rainey, whose Los Laureles Grade home overlooks the track. (He can glimpse Laguna's Turn 9 — named Rainey Curve in his honor — from a corner of his property.)

"Here I am putting a helmet back on, and she sees me in an accident. She has big concerns over things, but I told her I'm happy," he said.

Just two years ago, Rainey was dabbling in kart racing and considering turning it into an event worthy of Laguna Seca. The races on May 19 and 20 — with competitors from around the world — showed how well he succeeded.

SuperKarts compete in two classes — one sporting 250cc twins, the other using single-cylinder engines. Each class has a weight limit, and Rainey and his specially equipped kart had to lose a combined 50 pounds to meet the 462-pound threshold, he said.

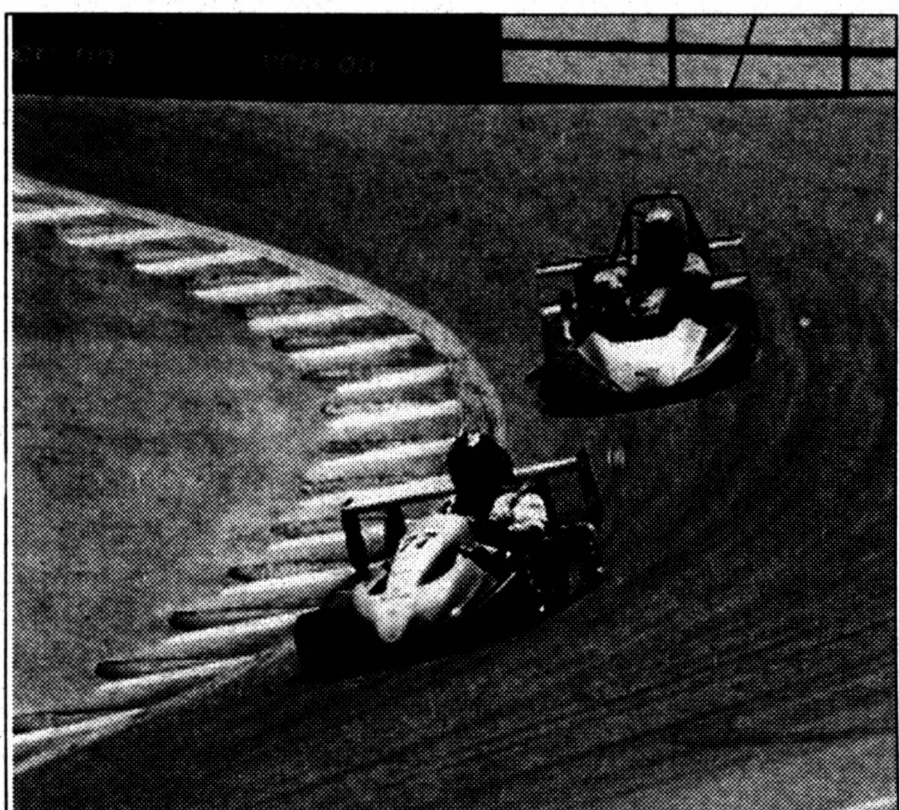

Rainey's father, Sandy Rainey — who worked on his son's bikes when he began racing at age 9 — serves as team mechanic and crew chief for Rainey and Lawson's team. They have a shop together in Los Angeles called RL Karting.

"When you take the seat out," Rainey said of his SuperKart, "there's so many wires and cables and stuff that it kind of looks like the Mir Space Station."

The eight-race SuperKart series will continue at other tracks this season — including Willow Springs in Kern County this month. Other tracks throughout the country have also shown interest, he said.

"It's opened a big door for us," he said of the Mazda

Raceway at Laguna Seca event. "We appreciate the support from the track at Laguna and all the fans who came to see SuperKarts for the first time, and we look forward to putting on an exciting show."

Three-time world champion motorcycle racer Wayne Rainey (rear) — paralyzed from the waist down — took to his home track at Laguna Seca like a duck to water May 19 and 20, finishing fifth in Sunday's SuperKart race. Rainey's teammate, former world champion Eddie Lawson, won the race with a substantial lead.

COTTAGES, MAIL DELIVERY ON COUNCIL AGENDA

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THE CARMEL City Council is scheduled reconsider its decision that the Sea Urchin and Periwinkle cottages on Scenic Road are not historic resources June 5 — a necessary step before the Carmel Planning Commission can decide on an application by owners Bill and Mary Louise Shellooe to renovate the cottages.

A year ago, the city council adopted a long litany of findings explaining why the cottages were not historic resources, but the California Coastal Commission rejected the Shellooes' demolition application last December and required them to come up with a new design incorporating the buildings.

Architect John Thodos has filed new plans with the planning department, but the application cannot be considered by the planning commission until the historic importance of the cottages is decided by the city council.

The council is also slated to:

■ consider a resolution that would allow the city to pay $60,000 to Peninsula Messenger Service for mail delivery in Carmel is also on the agenda, as is a discussion of the possibility of a permanent ordinance to prohibit mailboxes and addresses in the public right-of-way. That item was requested by councilwoman Barbara Livingston.

■ hear the second reading of the long-awaited Design Traditions Project — the residential design ordinance they modified last month to create as many as 250 potential rental units in the city — and approval of the budget will also be considered.

The regular Carmel City Council meeting begins at 3:30 p.m. on Tuesday, June 5, in council chambers at Carmel City Hall, Monte Verde and Ocean, Carmel. For more information, call 620-2000.

COMERICA

Comerica was also robbed by an armed man last September, but Poitras said that crime appears to be unrelated to these robberies.

Shell station also robbed

Two days earlier, a man in a ski mask robbed Lugo's Shell at San Carlos and Fifth at gunpoint in the early hours May 27, according to Poitras.

"The clerk complied, of course, and the person took off," Poitras said. He sees no relationship between this incident and the Comerica Bank robberies.

Although the robber was clothed from head to foot in black and wore a black ski mask, the clerk at the Shell station was able to report that he was a white male with hazel eyes, 5 foot 4 to 5 foot 6 inches tall and weighing 120 or 130 pounds, Poitras said.

The robber reportedly pulled a 9 mm semiautomatic handgun on the clerk and demanded money, then fled the scene before police arrived.

"It's a bit of an aberration to have three robberies in a week," Poitras said.

POUILLY FUISSE (Poo-ye Fwee-say) Fuhrman, 3-1/2, "Pooley" to most and "Pooh Bear" to his niece Madalynn and nephew Jaspar, sports a name in keeping with his French/Belgium heritage. He is a Bichon Frise with a penchant for long walks above Carmel Beach where Dad Bob takes him at least three times a week.

When we encountered Pouilly Fuisse fluffing along Scenic Rd. late Thursday morning, he resembled an animated toy, so charming and well groomed was he, so bouncy and twinkling of eye.

Pouilly has his own comfy bed at home in the kitchen, and three favorite playthings: A stuffed elephant, a stuffed otter and a stuffed bone. Both Dad Bob and Mom Nancy toss these to Pouilly from time to time so he can practice catching, at which he has become quite adept.

Pouilly Fuisse loves to eat people food — although he's really not supposed to — and he loves to keep tabs on things at his Pebble Beach home by taking a stance on the deck and surveying his realm.

But what he looks forward to the most are visits from his best friend Molly, a golden retriever who is three times Pouilly's size and who kindly defers to him as her very own plaything.

Commissioners give unanimous thumbs-down to Cachagua subdivision

By KIRSTIE WILDE

"I THINK I supported this in the past and now I wonder why."

With that, Monterey County Planning Commissioner Miguel Errea and three other commissioners reversed their earlier votes approving a 13-lot subdivision in Cachagua and, instead, joined all the other commissioners to turn it down May 30.

Neighbors who complained that 13 houses in the 284-acre Fox Creek subdivision would impact water, traffic, viewshed, frog habitat and the rural quality of life in Cachagua, happily congratulated each other outside the hearing room as developer Tom deRegt considered whether to appeal to the board of supervisors.

"I have some very fine neighbors who I have met, and they just don't want this project to move forward," deRegt told commissioners. After spending more than $3 million to buy the land and $640,000 to get to this stage in the approval process, deRegt is back to square one.

"The Cachagua Area Advisory Committee recommended approval in March 1999; the Subdivision Committee approved it in August 2000; this commission approved it [6 to 3] in November 2000 and then one of my neighbors appealed," a frustrated deRegt explained. Going into the May 30 meeting, Fox Creek also had the blessing of the Monterey County planning staff, which concluded that the project, with its 60-some conditions, would not have a significant impact on the environment.

Harmful to neighborhood

But neighbors like Shavaun Kennedy and Rod McMahan testified that grading, well drilling and road work would hurt the neighborhood.

"Our well is only 14 feet deep," said Wolfe. "If they take out the riparian vegetation and our well silts up, we won't have any water." She also testified that if the homes are built, "bears and lions may carry off your golden retrievers, maybe even your children."

Kennedy, who lives just west of Fox Creek, testified that the septic fields for the new houses could fail in an earthquake and poison his water supply with sewage. Another neighbor wondered if Tularcitos Creek and his well would dry up because of the subdivision.

McMahan accused one of the biologists who worked on the project of "straining the pond" to look for larvae of tiger salamanders, which he said would be a "violation of federal law."

Neighbor Louise Bishop suggested that deRegt be compelled to supply "at least one paid firefighter at the Cachagua Volunteer Fire Department" to make up for increased fire danger if the project were approved. Neighbor Maurice Wolfe, an anthropology professor, said enlarging the entrance to the subdivision would impact a "major, ancient, native American village site." The League of Women Voters sent a representative to argue that the subdivision would exacerbate the already horrendous traffic on Carmel Valley Road. And 90-year-old Salinas attorney John Muller, who owns 104 acres next door, sent an attorney to argue that the proposed subdivision — which averages one lot per 20 acres — was too dense.

Claims refuted

The environmental analysis completed by county planning staff refuted most of the complaints with studies that showed the project would not significantly impact red-legged frogs, burrowing owls or other threatened species; that no development will occur on slopes of more than 30 degrees; that all 13 houses will be hidden from Carmel Valley Road and Cachagua Road; that, with road improvements mandated in the plan, the project would not significantly affect traffic; that the proposed water and septic system met all health and safety regulations, and that it complied with inclusionary housing and zoning rules.

In a thinly veiled jab at the notoriously unresponsive workers at the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, staff noted that the hearing was delayed 35 days to give the USFWS "an opportunity to review the proposal for potential impacts to Endangered Species, specifically the California red-legged frog and the California tiger salamander." No word had been heard from anyone at USFWS, staff said, so it "must conclude that the biological information submitted is adequate and that no impacts will occur to rare or endangered species."

A black bear's sad trip to

The bear's final destination could have been predicted after it was sighted several times along Highway 68 — beginning with a raid on the garbage cans at Toro Place Cafe on Friday, May 18 (see map). By the early hours of May 23, the young American black bear (Ursinus americanus) had arrived in Pebble Beach and, finally, Carmel — where it visited an inn (top left) and peeked over a fence. With the arrival of full daylight, the crepuscular creature needed a place to rest. After running down Ocean Avenue, the bear climbed a large Monterey pine (below left). After settling comfortably on some sturdy branches, it yawned, stretched and fell sound asleep (below).

What can I say?

Let's go back to the late 1970s when I was working as a seasonal ranger in Yosemite for the National Park Service. I was stationed in the high country. My duties included road and campground patrols all along Tioga Road from Crane Flat to Tuolumne Meadows. Occasionally I got to do what I really loved most and that was foot patrols in the back country and occasional gigs with the "bear control" park biologists. I had many close encounters with black bears, some of them quite huge. Though those bears had the innate power to tear us from limb to limb, nobody ever told them that. They were overgrown pussy cats! About the only entity that need fear them was a jar of peanut butter!

I was in on several dartings, taggings, trappings, and relocatings of bear who would raid campers' campsites. Yosemite's bear control rangers were real pros at handling the errant ursine. I never saw a bear injured in any attempt to capture one.

Then there's the great city of Carmel-by-the-Sea! Last week, a small black bear wandered into downtown Carmel. I cannot tell you how rare an event this is. As a veteran Ventana Wilderness hiker/explorer — 30 years' worth — I've never seen a bear in our vast, wild coastal range. Cougars, yes. Condors, indeed. Boar, oh yeah. But bear? Bear have been rumored, but so elusive as to border on myth. And yet one found its way from the Ventana into Carmel, no small feat for that four-legged critter. And what did the City of Carmel do with its ever-so-special furry guest? They called in the Department of Fish and Game, who killed it!

I realize that the intentions were honorable — using a tranquilizer gun — but the timing was pathetic. It doesn't take a rocket scientist to know that one doesn't dart a bear when it's 60 feet up in the tree, especially if no safety nets or large air cushions have been deployed. Would a human survive a fall — conscious or unconscious — from 60 feet onto the hard ground below? What makes it any different for a bear?

Black bear may be abundant in the Sierra, having become the scourge of many campgrounds, but they are so rare in the local mountains that they might as well be regarded as an endangered species. So why weren't the real pros called in to handle that little bear in Carmel?

Jeffrey Van Middlebrook
Pacific Grove

Regret for a Fallen Bear

It's my understanding the assorted game wardens and law officials who took part in the action which killed Carmel's bear on Wednesday are seeking solutions for a less than fatal result when the next bear visit occurs. May I suggest common sense?

Common sense told us this visiting animal had been in the area for over a week, from Laguna Seca, through Pebble and finally, Carmel's Ocean Avenue. In that time it attacked no one, broke into nothing and ran from confrontation.

Common sense should have told us we were not dealing with an uncontrollable, carnivorous man-eater. Black bears, even in the wild, are either vegetarians or scavengers, dining on carrion when good fortune presents them with it. Black bears are not predatory stalkers, such as mountain lions.

Common sense showed that this animal was satisfied to simply amble in front of the phalanx of police cars, official cars and noisy onlookers which followed it. When the bear finally felt threatened it did not charge murderously into the group. It did what its mother taught it to do as a cub: climb a tree.

Common sense dictated to those in charge that: (1) Once up a tree the bear presented no immediate threat. (2) The day was young and patience was on the side of the pursuers. (3) They could isolate the animal with determined crowd control and, after a reasonable period of quiet, offer the bear a tempting, aromatic reason to come down (a store-bought roast chicken, for example, since a bear's olfactory sense is remarkably keen). (4) The bear should have been tranquilized when it was no higher than 30 feet off the ground, not seven stories up a tree.

I read where the officials in charge feel badly about the fatal results of their actions. The bear feels worse.

Michael Maryk
Carmel

No concern for public

The unfortunate accident in Carmel, effected by Fish & Game officers, is reported. It is commonplac to use reason and wisdom in handling such a situation.

It would be fitting to haunt his killers forever. Those responsible should be ashamed on both of your parts.

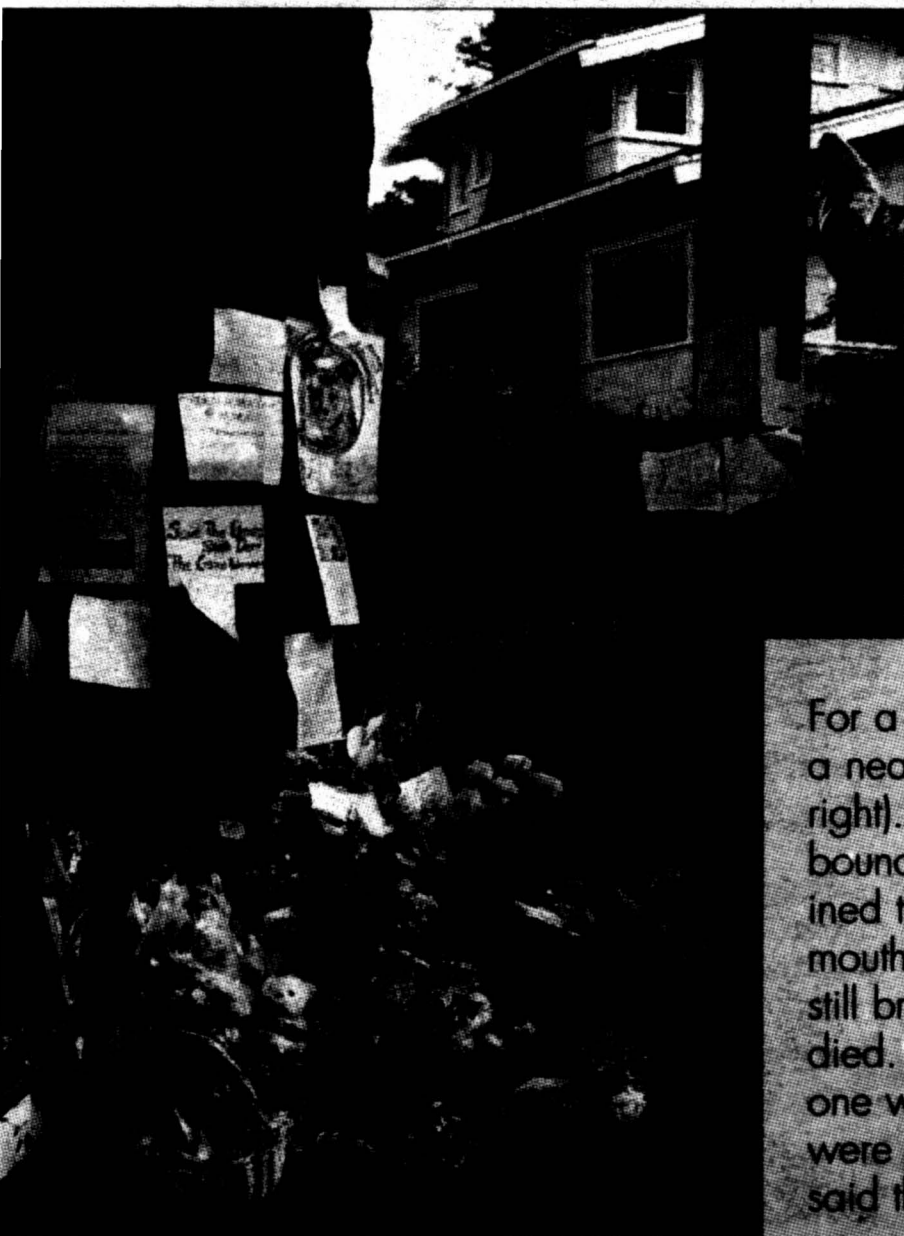

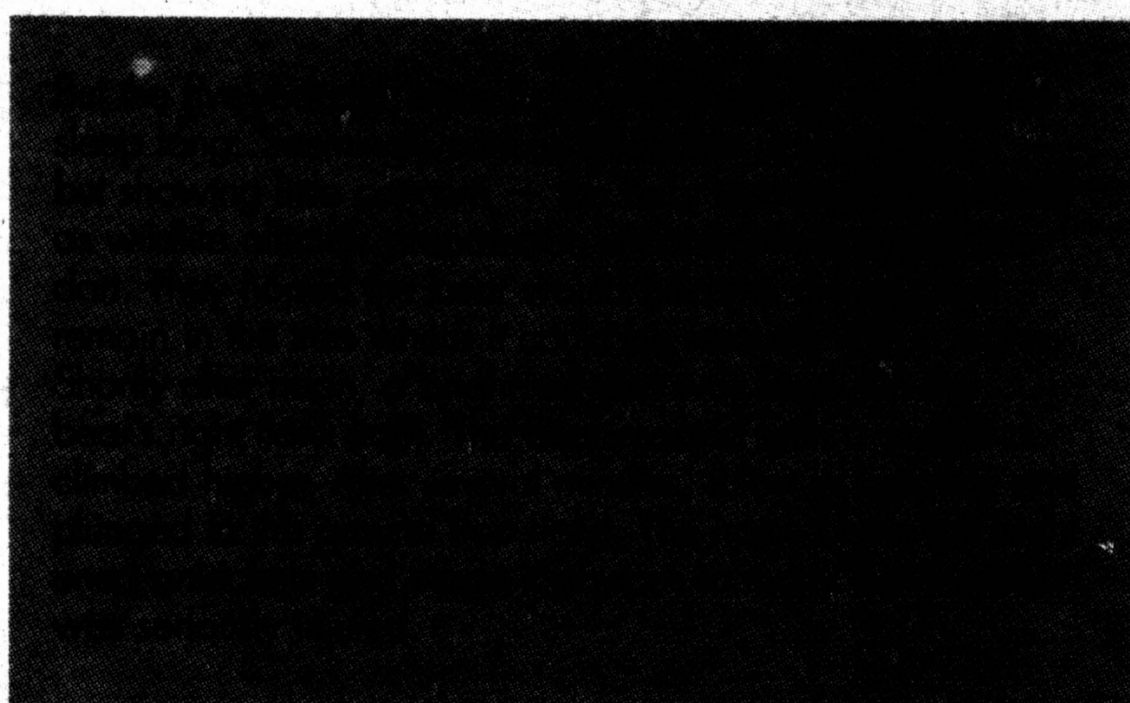

Robert Hotten
Professor and Conser
Carmel

Needless killing

I was appalled by the bear that wandered into Carmel. What would have happened if the bear had been tranquilized?

Carmel-by-the-Sea....

For a few moments, the bear lay alone in the corner of a neatly tended garden just off Ocean Avenue (above right). Wary wildlife officials approached the bear and bound its feet with leather straps (above). They examined the bear, which had begun to bleed from the mouth, before loading it onto a gurney. The bear was still breathing when it was carried away (right), but soon died. "We tried to do what was best for the bear," said one wildlife official. In the following days, as memorials were placed at the base of the bear's tree (left), many said the incident could have had a different outcome.

Remorse and anger over bear's death.

No trust

and unnecessarily forced incident by the amateur hands of cannot be rationalized or sup- for jurisdictions in moun- equipment, time, patience ing bears safely for all con- if this bear's ghost were to should be forced to resign. for not caring for the public

tree? That would have been an interesting situation! I cannot envision any possible explanation for putting the bear's life in that much risk. Was it so hard to wait for the bear to come out of the tree? Maybe, it was "Miller time" for the animal control guys?

Carmel - as a result of its flora and fauna - is an amazing place and having a wild bear in town is even more amazing. My wife and I visit the Carmel area many times each year to view your local wildlife. By virtue of our visits, we are supporting the local economy. Killing the animal just because it strayed into the city limits is patently wrong. If the bear was killed due to a particular Carmel or State policy, then this policy definitely needs to change. I don't consider myself an extreme animal rights activist but there is no way to justify needlessly killing the animal in this instance.

Breaux Walker
San Francisco

Basic training needed

It's obvious that the Fish and Wildlife people need some basic training in how to preserve the animals that we have left, versus destroying them. If the shooter, or any other large mammal, was struck by a tranquilizer dart 50-70 feet up in a tree, it's pretty obvious that he would fall to his death as well. What they did was no different than if the Carmel police had used attack rifles to destroy this animal which, of course, they had the common sense not to do.

What's next? Will the Carmel and Wildlife people start shooting dolphins in Monterey Bay on the pretext that they might bump into swimmers and divers and cause injuries?

Jerry Clay
Carmel

The Bear Spirit

At the heart of Carmel's cultural heritage is a group of highly creative "bohemians" who recognized how crucial bears were to this village and to California in general. My grandparents told me that when bears did wander into town it was considered a good omen, and they were respected and welcomed until they quickly left on their own.

For thousands of years the indigenous people here revered "bear kachinas" as omens of good or bad fortune. The comings and goings of bears in our original culture were revered, as it was throughout the state. Early Carmel bohemians, well versed on California bear lore, continued their love of bears.

They pointed out that the bear on the California flag originally did not represent just one little bear. It represented the Great Bear Spirit who serves as protector of California's natural resources. It also appears on the State Seal. If you study that seal carefully you'll see that the Goddess of Wisdom is sitting on an actual holy site on the Berkeley Hills. She and the Bear Spirit face Carmel to the south. The face of the Goddess is superimposed over Mount Tamalpais, holy to the face of the indigenous Wisdom Goddess and her bear. Study carefully the symbolism of her shield and sword for their profound meanings."

Those who chose not to wait for the bear to come down the tree on its own accord have severely damaged the very spirit of this community. Whether a gun shoots bullets or tranquilizer darts, it can be a deadly weapon when used wrongly. If there is no memorial service for the Spirit of this holy bear, with residents who choose to be in attendance, then we are not in compliance with the laws that have governed this community for thousands of years. The body of the bear must be in attendance and honored with heartfelt tears. The body must be disposed of ritually. Failure to conduct the proper rituals will be seen as an insult to the Bear Spirit who has so reverently reigned here for millennia, and the ignorance of all who don't offer prayers will adversely affect the destiny of this town.

requires projects with potentially historic resources receive environmental review as well, so the current ordinance
"leaves CEQA out of the loop," Rerig said.

Attorney Susan Brandt-Hawley, representing preservation activist Enid
Sales, said the protocols took advisory power away from the Historic Preservation Committee,
but Rerig said that committee may actually consider fewer applications because of the judge's ruling.

"My reading of the judge's decision is, if the structure is not on the list, then it's processed as a regular application, so the historic preservation committee will actually be seeing fewer," he said.

But if someone argues the building in question is a potential historic resource,
it would be evaluated also,
according to Rerig.

The planning department will work quickly to answer applicants' questions on how the ruling affects their plans, he said.

"We haven't seen the writ from the judge, and we have to determine how we're going to handle older houses, again, and what level of review they should receive," he said.

Resolution v. ordinance

In arguing for the writ of mandate, Brandt-Hawley claimed the interim protocols were really a de facto ordinance and should have undergone environmental review.

The law stipulates that ordinances can only be changed by adoption of another ordinance, which would require planning commission and city council approval, and some type of environmental review before it could take effect.
Such a process would have taken months.

The resolution, however, would not be considered a "project" under CEQA and would not require any environmental review because it contained nothing new, the city argued.

"Because of ambiguity over the interpretation, the city council said, 'We don't want to wait because in the interim, people are filing applications,'" Freeman said.

The protocols — adopted 4-1 by the city council a year ago — established higher thresholds for determining a building is historic and eliminated any references to historic districts within the city. They were also created to help address the handling of potentially historic resources until the historic preservation ordinance was completed.

Though that element was scheduled to be finished by the end of last year,
Freeman said the city now believes it will be completed by December.

Lights, camera, orchestra and all-stars MPC players shine in 'Grace & Glorie'

HEARING PROUD parents boast about their son or daughter making it onto the "All-Star" team doesn't immediately conjure up images of boys in tights, girls in corsets and violinists in knit caps. Thanks to director Hamish Tyler and the Forest Theater Guild, that's about to change.

To celebrate the Guild's 50th anniversary and the Forest Theater's 91st season, Tyler has drawn from seven area schools and put together a talented cast and crew for his production of the 1948 Tony-winning musical, "Kiss Me Kate."

On whole, the play is well cast and the performances convincing. In the lead roles are Sara Winkleblack as feisty Lillie/Kate, Shawn Levin as charmer Fred/Petruchio, Marya Hicks as Lois, Nick West as Bill and Paul Del Piero as the general. Blake Matheson and Tyler Heron are hilarious as two gangsters and the ensemble is at its best in the "Taming of the Shrew" scenes.

Porter's lyrics are rife with sophisticated sexual innuendo which are arguably inappropriate for middle and high school-aged students. They also require a degree of expressive experience a younger actor just doesn't have. This disparity is most evident in numbers such as "Too Darn Hot" (Bryan Weimer and dancers) and "Always True to You" (Marya Hicks, Nick West and dancers).

Some of the more charming moments are "Where Is The Life That Late I Led" (Shawn Levin), "Brush Up Your Shakespeare" (Blake Matheson and Tyler Heron) and "Tom, Dick or Harry" (Marya Hicks, Roarke Satava, Will Gifford and Nick West).

Choreography by Colleen Finegan shines brightest in "Bianca" and highlights the

CONSIDER ONE "citified Yankee" from New York and one "waste of a life red-neck" who's never been more than 50 miles from home. Not men, mind you, but women.

And one of them is too emotionally empty to live while the other's too stubborn to die. Now put them together in a one-room cabin on a mountain. Give them eggs to gather and Velveeta cheese with mayo sandwiches for lunch, and just see if you don't laugh so hard you cry. In fact, MPC Players' "Grace and Glorie" at Cherry Hall, is a stunning performance you won't want to miss.

The play was written by Tom Ziegler, a professor at Washington and Lee University in Virginia. Only his second work, it played off-Broadway and was later made into a "Hallmark Hall of Fame" TV movie. In two acts, "Grace and Glorie" runs a little over two hours and is a delightful blend of humor, insight, physical comedy and drama.

The story is about Grace, who has come back to what's left of her apple farm in the mountains of Alabama to die, and Gloria, an uprooted professional trying to fill her lonely hours as a hospice volunteer. Grace is basically alone, having outlived her husband and all five sons. So is Gloria, having imposed solitude on herself after suffering a tragedy. But their worlds collide on the mountaintop and their eyes and hearts are opened to surprising realities.

Director Conrad Selvig couldn't have cast his two actresses any better. In her second peninsula performance, Jolie Kobrinsky stars with veteran actress Neva Hahns in the two-women show. Kobrinsky's edgy portrayal of Gloria is balanced brilliantly between control and loss of it.

Hahns has been delighting area audiences for years and will melt your heart as the can-

REUNION BRINGS BACK MEMORIES FOR CHS CLASS OF '51

LIVING LIFE surrounded by gadgets, I've finally been forced to conclude that when the name of a portable electric device includes "power" or "cordless," it means one or more of the following:

— you need to do some weight training before picking it up,

— it'll fizzle out while you're standing precariously on the top step of the ladder,

— it's actually a stage prop for the store's display counter, and it shoots blanks (so to speak) or self-destructs on the fourth use.

— it needs to be run 'til its last gasp before placing it in its recharger or else you mess up the battery; and — if you do mess up and need new batteries, they cost 15 times more than a pace-maker.

Please, give me a cord, anytime.

CARMEL HIGH School's Class of '51 held its reunion May 17 at La Playa.

Steering committee member Carol Smith Rissel was very eager to promote the book of alumni recipes, "The Padre Cooks," sales of which will benefit an alumni scholarship fund for CHS achievers.

Pine Needles

By Sissi Maleki

The scholarship fund is run by Mike McClure and another classmate, surgeon Ron Stoney, M.D.

The steering committee also included Diane Lewis Hanger, Donna Douglas Bua, Niels Reimers and Barbara Horne Tiernan.

Niels reminisced with friends about the "Nine-Hole Club" he belonged to in school.

It was made up of a group of kids who would go to the fifth hole at Pebble Beach, wait until there was a gap between players, and slip in to play all the way through the 14th hole.

But it was too good to last.

On the way home one day, hitchhiking as they always did, the driver who picked them up — somehow guessing what they had been up to — drove them instead to the Pebble Beach pro shop where Peter Hay, the pro at the time, "chewed us out!"

Mavis Jones Petersen, who now lives in Huntington Beach, still remembers sneaking into the Carmel Valley Country Club pool with friends.

PHOTOS/SSI MALEKI

Donna Douglas Bua, Barbara Horne Tiernan, Niels Reimers, Diane Lewis Hanger and Carol Smith Rissel made up the Steering Committee for the 50th reunion of Carmel High School's Class of '51.

Bob & Monine Stebbins caught up with Chris Williams, now a local architect.

Now Bob, a retired professor of horticulture at Oregon State University, still lives up there.

Wildest thing he ever did in school?

"I raced my Model A Ford against a Chevy — I won but blew my engine!" he replied, laughing.

Alys Knight Bliesner, whose dad was Allan Knight, former Carmel mayor, was comparing notes on where people were born around here.

She said she had been the last baby born at the community hospital when it was on Torres Street.

Coincidentally, the Knight family home had been a beach house built in 1901 — just possibly the sixth house built in Carmel. It was used by the family for vacations, until they moved there permanently following the San Francisco earthquake.

Thor Rasmussen informed John Monroe: "Everyone looking at your old picture said how cute you were in it!" at which John replied, "Yeah, and it was a thousand years ago!"

Deborah Geering McMillan exchanged notes with everyone on other alumni who couldn't make it.

Sally van Niel confessed that her alumnus hubby, Jan, deserved coming out to this reunion, given the number of times she had "dragged him to my sorority reunions!"

Clare & Mike McClure came from Cedar City, Utah where they had moved just last fall.

Barbara Berg Beckett, an interior designer in Colorado, spoke of her recent work with high-end condos. Her former classmates listening attentively included Carol Stewart Hamlin.

Warren Masten, who wasn't an alumnus but had been hired to videotape the event, was having trouble getting people to talk on camera.

"People escape, duck, or . . . " he complained. (Boy, does Yours Truly know that problem!)

Many at the luncheon recalled the "great" parties thrown by Frans Doelman. When questioned, Frans, now living up in Washington state with his wife, Ruth, willingly volunteered the details.

"My twin, Hans, and I would throw parties at home, but it was restricted to couples."

He went on to explain: "That kept things under control . . . we all kept an eye on each other so my mother trusted us."

(This columnist still doesn't get how couples would be any better behaved, but hey, it was a different time . . .)

Phantom songs for ritzy crowd

The Boys & Girls Club held a glamorous gala that featured singer Davis Gaines at Spanish Bay on May 12.

For the $600 ticket price, guests were treated to a concert by Gaines — best known for his "Phantom of the Opera" role — along with a fabulous dinner and dancing to the Mike Marotta, Jr. band.

Organizing the event took at least six months, said event co-chair Karen Fanoe.

She and hubby Jim kept friends Hillis & Bill Phelps entertained during cocktails. The Phelps began Lockwood Winery in 1981.

Board member Julie Matuszek and executive director Donna Ferraro kept things humming as guests arrived.

Both mentioned that much was owed to the help the club has received from the Harden Foundation.

Don Rogers and Diane Frudden could not say enough about the organization.

"It's such an incredible experience to go on a tour of the Seaside facilities," Diane stated. "More people should take that tour to understand it's so much more than just an after-school program."

Drs. John & June Phillips had just returned from Berlin and a trip down the Elbe river.

"The whole place is still 25-30 years behind the rest of the world," John said, and June added: "They still have bullet holes in the buildings."

Alan Williams, whose Carmel Development Company was one of the event sponsors, came with Tucker Ramsay.

Mary Ann & Hal Leffel just had their second grandchild, now two weeks old, from their daughter, Andrea.

"She's totally adorable!" Mary Ann said, proudly.

By the way, she's got her hands full this year as chairman of the peninsula's chamber of commerce. That's in addition to her work as a banker!

Mike Beyer and Sharon Smith had come on behalf of sculptor Richard McDonald, who's a big supporter of the club.

Other guests included Susan McDonald, Greg Milloway, Darleen Fontes, Tina Burnett and Elia Donlon.

American Lung Association executive director Karen Fulton had a nice crowd at this year's Tee Off fundraiser.

Tee Off for lung disease fight

The Ninth Annual Tee Off for TB & Lung Disease of the American Lung Association (ALA) of the Central Coast took place May 24th at Quail Lodge.

Many attend this event year after year, which helps explain the $345,000 raised to date.

Mary Lou Winge said three generations of her husband's family play every year. There was dad-in-law Don, hubby Bruce and son Erik.

Committee member Frank Amato, there with wife Reggie, is also a longtime supporter. The two were entertaining good friends Judy & Joe Heslin — avid golfers all.

Allen Taylor had along his close cronies, Dick Burns and Bill Whitely, though neither played this year.

Donna & Larry Larson looked over the huge selection of wines in the silent auction, while also chatting with Jo & Steve Scurrah. Larry admitted that invitations haven't quit coming since he mistakenly bid on some wine a few years ago, thinking it was a photograph, and bid up to $700.

"It was the most expensive bottle I ever bought!" he said, laughing.

This was Nancy & Yanni Kavas' first time at the event, having moved from Piedmont.

Others there included CHOMP's former CEO, Jay Hudson and current CEO, Dr. Steve Packer. Steve reportedly used to be nicknamed "Doogie" before he became the head honcho.

KION's Hunter Finnell, longtime emcee for this Tee Off, has been terrific at what executive director Karen Fulton calls his "Vanna White" skills.

Karen, by the way, is so highly regarded for her work, that she was just chosen to be president of the Congress of Lung Association Staff, which makes her the staff representative on the national board of ALA.

It's a fitting tribute for someone who has not only lost a favorite aunt to lung cancer but a son to TB.

■ Mozart Society concertizes in home

It was a gala violin and piano recital benefiting the Mozart Society of California that brought music connoisseurs to the Pebble Beach estate of Jean Hurd on May 18.

smooth soft shoe of Nick West. In general the dancers are consistent but, excluding West and a few others, they lack the level of experience for the routines to qualify for "all-star" status.

Like the actors and tech crew, the orchestra is composed of students, under the direction of Dr. Robert Klevan. Stephanie Cho is concert mistress. The musicians are to be especially commended for a strong performance under difficult conditions on opening night. Away from the warmth of the two large fire pits, the players face the challenge of keeping their fingers and cheeks nimble and their instruments tuned in what was an unrelenting damp chill.

Costumer Sarah Wachel and set designer Carey Crockett pull double duty in providing for the two juxtaposed settings and time periods. The technical crew struggled with the sound system throughout most of the show, but otherwise the Forest Theater provides a beautiful venue.

The concept of an all-star stage production offers an amazing opportunity for Monterey Bay's young talent. It is a grand venture and one that has the potential to draw considerable community interest and involvement provided the casting is drawn equitably from all area schools to maintain a true "all-star," best of the best reputation. behind them.

"Listening to the violin just brought tears to my eyes," said Mary Margaret Fleming.

"It's truly a unique experience having a concert in a private home," said Artie Early, who had named the group before she actually joined the board.

Along with such wonderful sounds, a delicious "stand-up supper" from caterer Deborah Smith, the society's exclusive caterer, had everyone returning for seconds.

As if that wasn't sufficient, everyone had a chance to tour the fabulous medieval hand-hewn wine cellar, designed and built by Doug Borregaard and filled with Jean's collection of wines from around the world.

New residents Dr. Roger and Katie Niva, formerly of Seattle, were also invited.

Doug is building their house on Carmel Point and they'll be moving in soon.

Monique Gardiner, accompanied by Walt Stewart, was the picture of spring with her outfit.

Board president Dan and Emily Wallis, vice president Rudolph and Hylah Schroeter, and society founder and chairman Clifton Hart were also in attendance.

Others there included John and Heidi Pratt, Carole Dooley, Lois Marshall, Darnell Whitt, Lyn Bronson and John and Marti Myszak.

■ Art Festival reception draws crowds

The Carmel Art Festival reception, organized by the Gallery Alliance, took place May 19 at the Carmel Art Association.

It was a shoulder-to-shoulder crowd that milled about that evening, admiring the various artworks.

tankerous but lovable Grace.

The actresses meld a difficult mix of humor and drama to forge a nearly flawless performance. Any opening weekend gaffes were so smoothly folded into the action as to become part of the show.

Ziegler writes his characters with layered intent. He escapes cliché by giving them precision dialogue and charming quirks which Selvig exploits with understated finesse. The comedic surprises make the poignant moments bitter-sweet and keep the emotional intensity immediate and real.

Staging is dimensional and so well utilized it gives the audience the sense of sitting in the room. Strains of bluegrass favorites fill the scene interludes and the sound technician did a superb job with everything from clucking chickens to falling trees.

At one point, Grace confesses how a young preacher once made her feel like "a lump o' lard in a hot skillet." The show is like that too; it sizzles with emotion, passion and challenge. It shines with the pleasure of experiencing life's simple joys, small moments and rich lessons. Quills up!

Lulu Billian, the "Art & Antiques" publisher's wife, chatted with John and Judy Sears.

Hal and Jane Ulrich were engaged in a deep conversation with local award-winning painter Edward Norton Ward and Marlina Bussand.

"He was very gracious in giving credit to the other artists," Jane noted about Ward.

Another award winner, Barry John Raybould, was impressed at the talent around him.

"It's so wonderful to be with all these great artists," he said, as his wife Jacqui chatted with friends.

Daphne Bertero, who lives in Orinda, was heard sharing her excitement with friend Bill Monty about getting a vacation house in Carmel.

Bill Whitely had come with Sue Clark who was attending this festival for the first time. Her cousin, local painter William Hook, was an artist in the show.

THE BOOKSHELF

Wisdom came from lazy conversations on a sunny front porch in Kentucky

"LIFE TEACHINGS: Raising a Child," is a delightful book to read in every respect. It is instructive without being pedantic and written in a gentle voice.

Jeanie Davis Pullen, the author, is an educator, consultant and speaker with an advanced degree in gifted child education. As well as teaching high school, she teaches graduate courses at university level, and for 13 years has been the director of a large summer institute for gifted children in the Minneapolis/St. Paul area.

The book embraces 35 topics — each two to three pages in length — so that the book can be picked up and read when time is convenient. Pullen, in the book's foreword, tells how she, as a child growing up in Kentucky, listened as her parents, relatives and family friends talked of various matters in "easy, musing fashion." She says she heard much wisdom in those childhood porch talks on warm, lazy afternoons.

The wisdom, she said, came from life experiences and knowledge, and that is exactly how she approaches each of the book's topics. She often refers to her daughters, Lara and Julie, recounting how she and her husband helped them reach maturity with self-confidence and pride in their accomplishments. Julie, who has a Ph.D. in oceanography, is a civilian research scientist at the Naval Postgraduate School in Monterey.

If you are raising a family, or your children are raising theirs, this is a wise and wonderful book to have on hand.

Published by Yellow House Productions, P.O.

MUSICA COSMOPOLITA y Caminos del Arte presents a Latin Roots Festival this Saturday, June 2 at the Steinbeck Forum in the Monterey Conference Center. It begins at 5 p.m. with a children's show featuring multicultural songs and stories by Juan L. Sanchez and continues into the evening with Ballet Folklorico Aguila Real and Mexican songstress Niko Alvarez. The Festival culminates with a concert featuring the Juan L. Sanchez Ensemble with special guest artist Mario Flores.

Plugged In

By Stephen L. Vagnini

Formed in 1997, the group features the verse and passionate vocals of Sanchez plus an all star lineup of musicians that includes Paul Contos on flutes and saxophones, Noe Hinojosa and Flores on Latin percussion, Steve Uccello on stand-up bass and Dayan Kai on piano, mandolin, accordion and many other instruments.

The group's music is rooted in Nueva Cancion ("new folk") but incorporates rhythmic and melodic nuances that can be traced to contemporary urban jazz, Flamenco fusion and Middle Eastern music. Their 1997 CD release, "Cosmopolita" includes songs like "Gary," the true story of a child torn by violence and abuse and "Mitakuye Oyasim," an ode to nature that honors Native American traditions. Tickets are available in advance at Bombay Imports, 345 Calle Principal, in Monterey. Call 647-8502 for more information.

Saxophone virtuoso George Young moved to Carmel Valley last year by way of Los Angeles and New York City where he made his reputation pursuing a successful career in recording studios and as a sideman for the likes of Liza Minnelli and Paul Simon. A member of the "Saturday Night Live Band" for five years, tonight Young appears at the Hyatt Monterey along with drummer David Thomas Morwood, bassist Pete Rose and pianist Bob Phillips. Music starts at 7. There is no cover charge.

Johnny Rawls, one of the top touring talents in soul and blues today, makes his long anticipated return to Sly McFly's on Cannery Row this Friday night, June 1. Born and raised in Mississippi, Rawls has spent more than two decades apprenticing as a sideman to many of the top blues artists including Little Johnnie Taylor, Z.Z. Hill and O.V. Wright. His 1999 release, "My Turn To Win" charted on the Living Blues Top 20 Radio. Saturday night, June 2, blues guitar legend Junior Watson plays jump blues at Sly's. Music starts at 9.

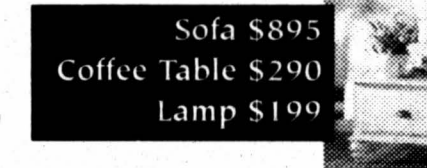

Juan L. Sanchez Ensemble

Borders Books in Sand City continues to promote a wide variety of music and this weekend the "clean and well lit place" features two Central Coast pop rock groups, Big Rain and Foamscape Friday and Saturday nights, June 1-2, respectively. Big Rain, a pop rock quartet out of Santa Cruz, featuring singer/songwriter/bassist Bruce Guynn and guitarist Peter Alaimo, performs in support of their latest CD, "When Magic Strikes." Foamscape, self-described "power-popsters and super folk-rockers," plays a snappy blend of quirky up-beat rock and covers by the Byrds, World Party and the Rolling Stones. Shows at Borders start at 7:30. There is no cover charge.

Taking a bird's-eye view of valley vineyards

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

ROBERT MONDAVI Coastal Wines, Earthbound Farm and Passionfish Restaurant all welcomed wine and food writers from across the country to the Monterey Peninsula May 18 and 19 in celebration of spring, sustainable agriculture, and the bounty it produces.

A flight up and down the Salinas Valley was conducted by Robert Mondavi Coastal winemaker Jeff Kasavan and Robert LaVine, director of winegrower relations for the Central Coast. Vineyards planted closest to the Monterey Bay in the 75-mile long Salinas Valley — the area 28 to 32 miles inland from the bay — and on the east-facing Santa Lucia Highlands mountains are best for varietals that enjoy the cooler climate, such as Pinot Noir and Chardonnay. Vineyards planted farther south, from Greenfield to San Ardo (40 to 70 miles inland) are best suited to Robert Mondavi Coastal Bordeaux varieties — Cabernet Sauvignon, Merlot and Sauvignon Blanc.

The two mountain ranges that embrace the Salinas Valley, the Santa Lucias to the west and Gabilans to the east, create a wind tunnel that brings fog and cold air off the Pacific Ocean beginning around Moss Landing. As the distance from the bay increases, there is a gradual transition from very cool to moderately warm growing conditions, allowing the planting of grape varieties in the environment where they thrive best.

One of the main messages given to the wine and food writers is that the winegrowing team at Robert Mondavi Coastal is committed to natural farming, working in harmony with nature, as is Earthbound Farm.

Tied in with the educational event was a visit to Earthbound Farm on Carmel Valley Road where the writers harvested large baskets of organically grown produce. Earthbound R&D farmer Mark Marino and Passionfish Restaurant chef/owner Ted Walter led the tour. Later, fresh produce was used in preparing roasted baby beet salad with mint dressing and spicy baby Caesar salad with crisp Parmesan chips.

The writers were later taken to Passionfish Restaurant in Pacific Grove for a luncheon prepared by the indefatigable Walter and paired with Robert Mondavi Coastal wines.

Pipe dream

DESAL IS dead, killed by the shortage of another essential public resource: electricity.

Five years ago, local water officials were criticized for pegging the price of electricity needed to run a desal plant at seven cents per kilowatt hour. They were exaggerating the cost to make desal seem infeasible compared to a new dam, their critics claimed.

How quaint that critique seems now, with electricity at 20 cents per kwh and climbing.

The utter impracticality of desal as a major public water source, while buried in a new report from the Public Utilities Commission on the Monterey Peninsula's water shortage, leaps like a tiger from a consultant's statement that powering a desal plant to help solve our water shortage will require as much juice as 2,000 homes.

The Monterey Peninsula isn't the Brazilian rain forest, but it's not the Gobi Desert either. Our climate is semi-arid, with droughts occurring every 20 years or so. But on average, rainfall is plentiful enough for the 100,000 people who call the Peninsula home. The basic facts are sobering:

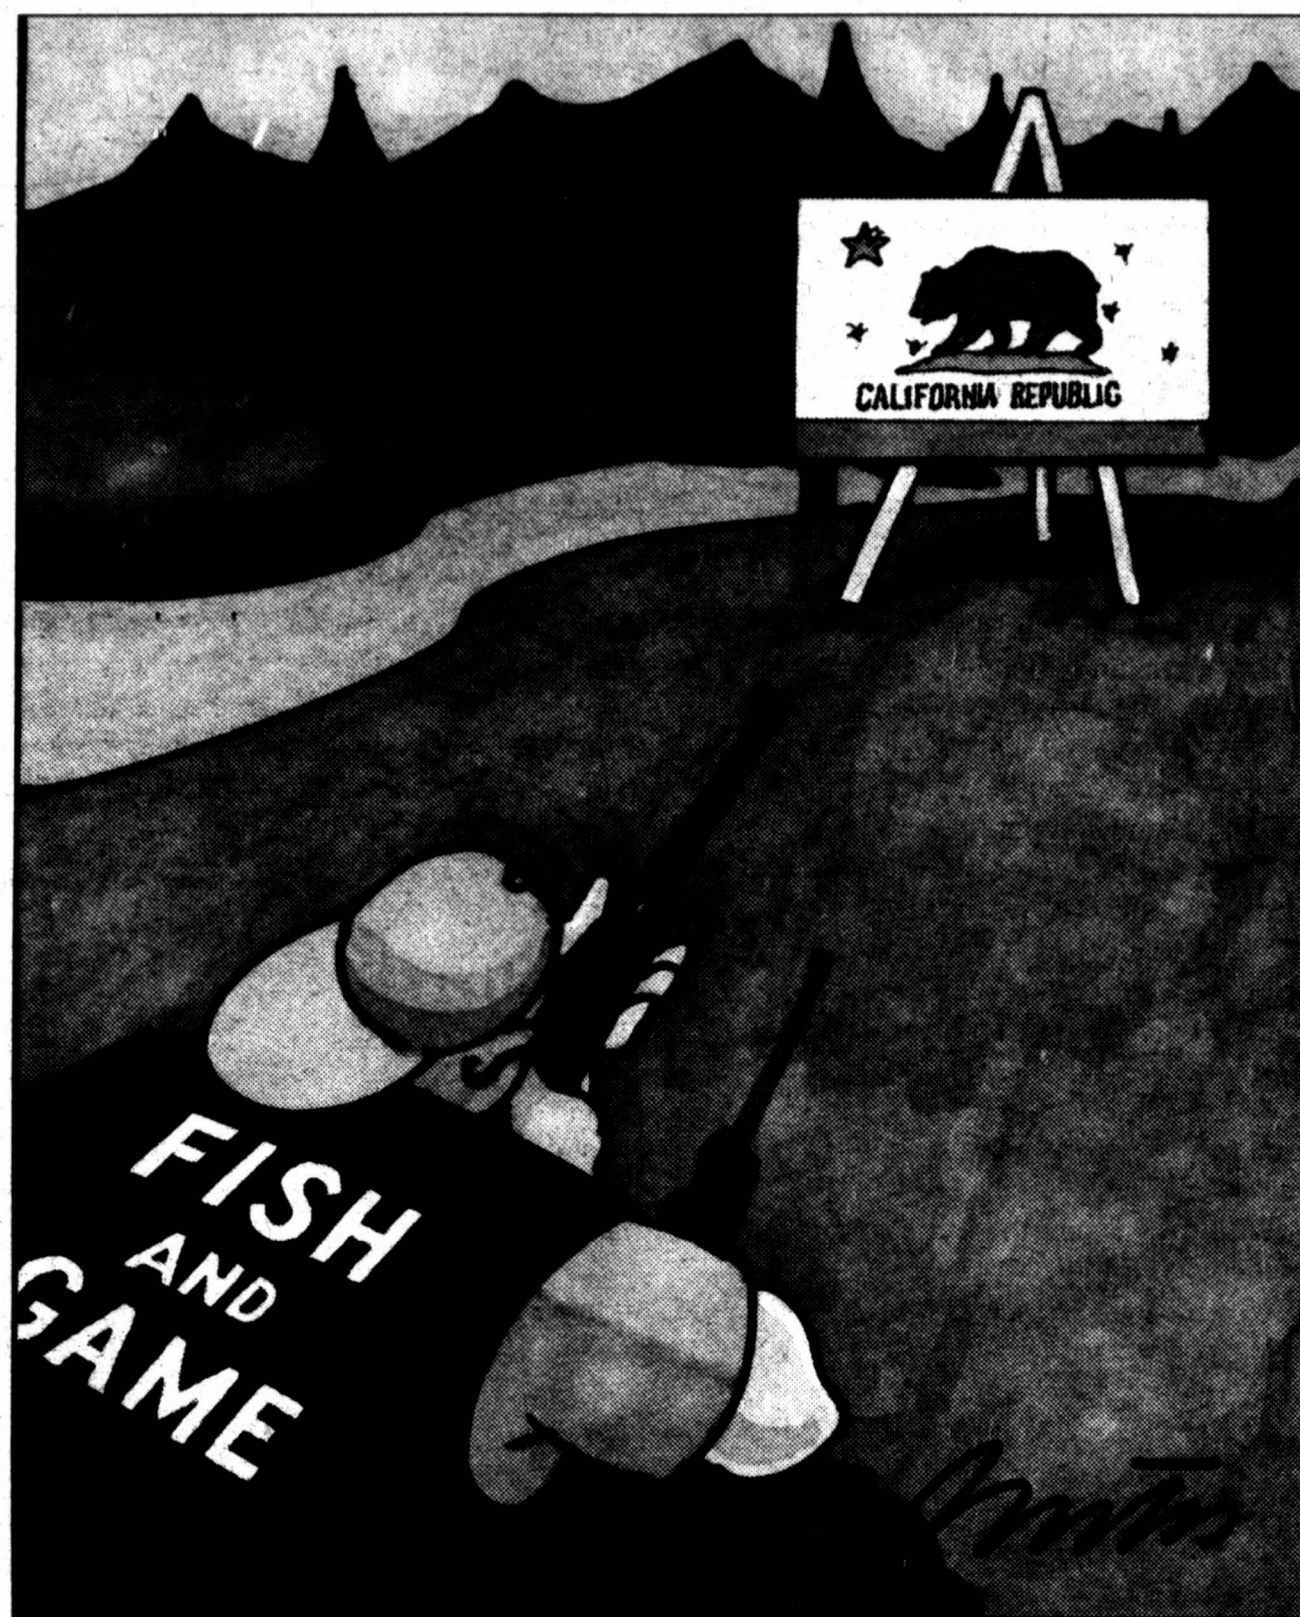

The Carmel River watershed contains 255 square miles of land. At an average of 20 inches of rain a year, more than 300,000 acre feet of pure H<sub>2</sub>O fall on that land every year. Water use by all Cal-Am customers is less than 15,000 acre feet per year.

Despite these facts, somebody (the PUC, no less) wants this community to spend millions and use a colossal amount of electricity — which mainly comes from burning fossil fuels — to purify water from the sea? Stupid is the word that comes to mind. In Saudi Arabia they use desal quite effectively. With oil to burn and fewer than three inches of rain a year, they have no choice.

Instead of building an expensive, wasteful and superfluous factory to turn sea water into fresh, this community should let Mother Nature do the job with her giant solar-powered water purifying system called evaporation.

Increased storage — whether it be behind a new dam, injected into aquifers or in an off-stream reservoir — is the solution to our water problem, not the fantasy called desal.

'Creative, analytic minds'

Dear Editor,

The front page of the May 4 issue of The Carmel Pine Cone contained two articles illustrating creative ideas of two of our elected officials. First was the excellent proposal of Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud to increase the supply of affordable housing by allowing owners of non-owner occupied houses to rent out their subordinate units as well as their main houses, which proposal the city council quickly passed. Of course, one has to define what is meant by "affordable housing" in Carmel and whether the owners of those properties would accept such affordable rent.

The other creative idea was that of Supervisor Dave Potter, acting in his capacity as a member of the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District, to ask the State Water Resources Control Board to reduce the amount of water they required Cal-Am to save by 7,909 acre-feet. Many residents agree with his emphasis on storing water from the annual water run-off of the Carmel River in either the Seaside basin or other storage sites and on desilting the existing Los Padres and San Clemente dams. Both of these have been proposed for many years and are readily achievable in a short time. I believe that these two suggestions would make a large dent in our water shortage problem and perhaps even make it disappear.

Congratulations to these two public servants for their creative, analytical minds and their efforts to improve the quality of life on the peninsula.

BEAR

Huckins. "He'd become conditioned to eating out of dumpsters and trash cans — and sooner or later somebody may have been injured by that bear."

"A fed bear is a dead bear, once they get used to eating human food," said fish and game spokesman Steve Mantarano.

As the bear moved west, local game wardens tried to track it, and nearly had a chance to tranquilize it late Monday at Foothill Elementary School near Monterey Peninsula Airport.

"They never got an opportunity because of the darkness," Huckins said.

Tuesday, game wardens practiced with a brand-new tranquilizer gun to make sure they were familiar with its operation, the fish and game report says. Wednesday morning they got their chance when the bear showed up in Carmel. But darting it on the ground wasn't the best option, according to Huckins.

"The drugs might not have taken effect, his adrenalin could kick in, and then he's face-to-face with somebody who gets injured," he said.

Starting about 8 a.m. Wednesday, Carmel police officers followed the Carmel bear from one back yard to another and sought guidance about what to do.

If the bear posed on imminent threat to the public, police officers would be justified in killing it with a shotgun, according to Ceccon. Otherwise, "I advised them not to press the bear, to attempt to keep a loose perimeter and that the situation would be more stable if the bear chose to go up a tree," Ceccon wrote in his report.

"When he's on the ground, you have no control over the situation, but if he goes up a tree, the situation stabilizes," Huckins agreed.

With the bear in the tree, wildlife officials met nearby to decide what to do.

"Our primary concern was that of public safety," Ceccon said. "Although the bear had not been aggressive toward humans, it was still a very large, wild animal and there was no way to predict its behavior if it left the tree and was running scared through Carmel. Our secondary concern was how to safely remove the bear from the area without causing undue injury to the bear. We believed that if we were to tranquilize the bear in the tree, there was a good chance the bear would simply go to sleep in the tree."

In case the bear fell, the Carmel Fire Department provided sleeping bags and cardboard boxes to be used as padding around the tree. "We had access to a cargo net, but did not have suitable supports to deploy it around the tree," Ceccon said.

At 12:16 p.m., fish and game biologist Jeff Cann fired a single tranquilizer dart with a mixture of Telazol and Xylazine. The dart struck the bear in the right hind leg.

Ceccon described the bear's fall:

"When the bear was darted, it climbed higher up the tree and came to rest in branches on the north side. The bear's new location placed it above a residential garage and fence — an area we had not been able to pad or protect in any manner. Wardens Keiser and Mills, a local animal control officer and I grabbed a canvas tarp provided by CDF and attempted to hold the tarp underneath the bear, hoping to break its fall should it fall from the tree. I was holding the corner of the tarp directly under the bear and was standing under the corner of a garage. In approximately four minutes, the drugs took effect and the bear slid out of the tree, falling directly toward me. When the bear had fallen approximately halfway to the ground, I determined that I could do nothing to break its fall and sidestepped to my right to keep from being struck by the bear. The bear struck the corner of the garage and the top of the fence approximately 10 feet from where I had been standing."

After loading the bear into a truck, fish and game personnel took it to a veterinarian in Carmel Valley, who determined that the bear had died. The bear was then taken to "a location in South county" and buried, the fish and game report says. Almost immediately, it was dug up and taken to a lab in Santa Cruz for a necropsy.

'The drugs might not have taken effect, his adrenalin could kick in, and then he's face-to-face with somebody who gets injured.'

— Game warden Barry Ceccon

"The bear, which was about five years old, died from a ruptured liver, a punctured lung and other internal injuries, which is what we expected," said Dr. David Jacobs, a fish and game veterinarian. There was no sign of rabies or other brain abnormalities, he said, but there were numerous bird shot pellets in the bear's body. "The wounds were all healed over, so my guess was that about a year ago somebody tried to scare the bear away from his property," Dr. Jacobs said.

Black bears are very common in California — with an adult population of about 25,000. More than 1,500 black bears are legally hunted in California every year. In North America, about 30,000 are killed by hunters annually, according to research compiled by the University of Michigan.

Nevertheless, the official reports also show that fish and game officials were immediately aware that the death of the Carmel bear had provoked bitter public criticism. For a sample of that criticism, please see pages 12 and 13A.)

The carcass of the Carmel bear remains in a freezer at a Santa Cruz fish and game office, pending discussions of its ceremonial disposal by local Native American groups.

Veteran Carmel Pine Cone reporter Tamara Grippi wed Ron Hubbard May 27 at an outdoor ceremony in Moraga. Her nine attendants included her sisters Noel Crosby (far left) and Lark Grippi (center) and Pine Cone reporter Mary Brownfield. The newlyweds are honeymooning in Canada after which the bride will resume her duties at The Pine Cone.

FRIENDS OF ERICA AXTELL are invited to attend a celebration of her life at 4 p.m. Friday, June 8 in the garden of the Livingston/Kohn home, San Carlos Street, two houses NW of 13th in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Those who wish to are encouraged to share their memories of her at this informal event. The celebration is hosted by Esther Haskins, Lynn Lupetti, Ed Lohmann, Barbara Livingston and Robert Kohn.

KATHERINE SIMPSON PENFIELD, 88, died May 24. A native of Texas, she was a 50-year resident of San Francisco and Menlo Park before moving to Carmel in 1989.

She received B.A. and B.S. degrees from McMurry College, Abilene, Texas in 1933. Mrs. Penfield was an assistant professor of secretarial studies and business English at McMurry. She later held administrative and secretarial positions with the National Labor Relations Board in Fort Worth and Washington, D.C., at Stanford University and Bechtel International Center.

Her many affiliations included the Stanford Music Guild, DeYoung Museum, Nature Conservancy, Save-the-Redwoods and the Sierra Club.

Mrs. Penfield is survived by her grandchildren, Victoria of London, and Michael Penfield Ero of Alameda.

A memorial gathering will begin at 2 p.m. Sunday, June 3 at Carmel Valley Manor, to be followed by a vespers service at 5:45 p.m. Memorials are suggested to the Carmel Bach Festival or American Cancer Society.

Longtime Carmel resident MARY GILLET TURNER, 94, died May 15 in Monterey.

She was born in Chicago and had divided her time between Tequesta, Fla. and Carmel for the past 20 years.

Mrs. Turner graduated from Northwestern University and was a private pilot and accomplished figure skater. She was also an accomplished golfer until a month before her death.

She is survived by a daughter, Barbara Vinje of Carmel Valley; a son, Alfred McDougal of Chicago; a sister, Edith McLaren of Winnetka, Ill.; seven grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren.

Memorials are suggested to the Hospice Foundation.

Supes say Carmel Valley Road drivers must slow — a little

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE SPEED limit on two segments of Carmel Valley Road — from east of Via Mallorca to All Saints Day School and from Chateau Julien to Mid Valley Center — will drop from 55 mph to 50 mph, the Monterey County Board of Supervisors decided this week.

There will now be six speed limit changes on the 6.2-mile stretch of Carmel Valley Road between Highway 1 and Robinson Canyon Road.

"Ideally you would have one speed limit, but the road varies in geometry and it's not appropriate to zone it all one speed," public works director Lew Bauman said.

Instead, the proposed changes are based on criteria set by the state vehicle code, Bauman told the supervisors. In order to prevent jurisdictions from lowering speed limits without just cause — and creating speed traps — the state requires limits to reflect the speed at which 85 percent of the motorists drive.

The county's traffic study also took into account road geometry and accident records, Bauman said.

But some supervisors wondered if the numerous speed-limit changes would really slow drivers down on Carmel Valley Road.

"It's almost like a sampling of speed limits," supervisor Judy Pennycook said. "If you don't have compliance, you would have more problems because you'd have one half going the speed limit and the other half doing whatever they can get away with."

Bauman said pending legislation to allow a double-fine zone in the area, coupled with increased enforcement, should help keep drivers in check.

Representatives from Hacienda Carmel and Del Mesa Carmel objected to the recommendation that the speed limit be kept at 55 mph near their intersections on the four-lane section of Carmel Valley Road.

"We have a concentration of well-aged, licensed drivers that come into that zone," said Bill Piercy of the Hacienda Carmel Community Association. "We feel that a 45 mph limit is mandatory in that area."

But lowering the speed limit to 45 mph on the four-lane section would not be effective, which is why state guidelines recommend against it, according to Bauman.

"Jockeying for position and racing is clearly outside the law," he said. "The solution is enforcement, especially with a double-fine zone."

Truth behind Notleys Landing photo

By PAUL MILLER

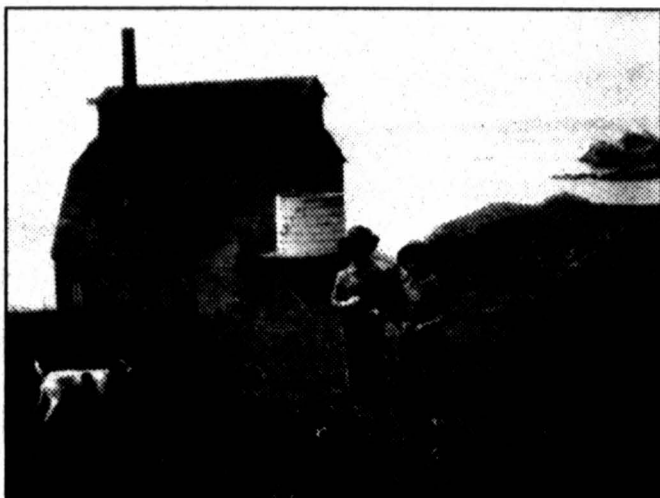

THE NIECE of the two boys pictured in an historic photo of Notleys Landing — recently acquired by the Big Sur Land Trust — has corrected some misinformation about the photo contained in a May 18 article in The Pine Cone.

Barbara R. Von Protz-Chamberlain of Seaside says the photo was taken in the summer of 1913.

"The two boys (my uncles) are Roy Martin Trotter (at age 7) and Henry Marshall Trotter (at age 5). Their mother, Adelaide, was the youngest daughter of Big Sur pioneers Michael and Barbara Pfeiffer," she said.

The young boys' father, Samuel Marshall Trotter, first came to Big Sur with William Notley, Ed Davis and Jack Roberson in 1893 on the advice of Mr. I. N. Swetnam (who owned property in the Garrapata area) to investigate taking up logging claims along the coast, Von-Protz-Chamberlain added.

"In late 1894, Sam Trotter began building four houses on those timber claims while William Notley bought land in Garrapata and Palo Colorado and his brother, George Notley, supervised opening up a camp and building the road between the timber claims and the "dog-hole" shipping port which became known as Notleys Landing. Sam Trotter was contracted to do the construction then later bought the property," she said.

The Trotter brothers, Roy Martin and Henry Marshall, circa summer 1913

Later, the timber operations moved to Bixby Landing. Between 1905 and 1922, the buildings at Notleys Landing were removed to make way for livestock and grain pastures.

Robles del Rio water transfer trial date set

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A LAWSUIT brought against the county by activist Ed Leeper to stop the transfer of 6.65 acre-feet of water credits to 19 Peninsula residential projects will go to trial July 24 unless a settlement is reached, Monterey County Superior Court Judge Michael Fields said May 25.

The judge has yet to rule on whether a temporary restraining order he placed on the transfer in March should remain in effect.

Richard Rosenthal, Leeper's attorney, argued that the water credit transfer — which received narrow approval by the Monterey County Board of Supervisors and the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District — will cause irreparable harm to the Carmel River. The project did not receive adequate environmental review under CEQA, he said.

Robles del Rio Lodge owner Glen Gurries' attorney, John Bridges, responded that by drilling a new well into a separate aquifer and severing Cal-Am service except for emergency use, the Robles plan has benefited the river by 9 acre feet per year. And once water is being used by new users, there still will be a net savings to the river of 1.3 acre-feet, he said.

Fields had placed a temporary restraining order on the county to stop the water transfer, ruling that it could harm the river and that Leeper likely has a chance of succeeding in court.

At the May 25 hearing, he also considered whether the TRO should be lifted or continue throughout the course of the trial.

"I haven't seen anything that should change the court's mind," Rosenthal said.

Bridges argued that his client had done his best to answer questions on the timing of the water credit transfer project in relation to the separate lodge restoration project that was approved in 1997.

"If you start with X and end with X plus 1.3 acre-feet, where is the harm?" he asked.

LIMIT

The new limits are to take effect 30 days after the ordinance was approved 4-0 by the board — 5th District Supervisor Dave Potter was absent — and will be subject to regular review by the public works department for effectiveness.

State Assembly Bill 398, which would permit the establishment of a double-fine zone on Carmel Valley Road, is currently under review by the legislature.

POLICE LOG

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of seven 2002 Ford Thunderbirds parked in the red zone directly across from CFD. All seven vehicles were moved by their respective owners.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Woman contacted and warned regarding her music being too loud.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of two vehicles drag racing in the area of Monte Verde and Santa Lucia with another subject video taping. Vehicles stopped. Video tape reviewed and it was determined that the vehicles were not engaged in a speed contest. All subjects were counseled regarding a more safe way to complete their school project.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: San Carlos resident reported receiving harassing phone calls from a subject who is upset that the victim is dating his ex-wife. Telephoned the suspect and he admitted calling the victim. He said he will not call or bother him again.

Pebble Beach: Woman reported losing her cell phone in the ocean.

Carmel Valley: Via Poca resident reported her wallet was stolen from her car.

Carmel Valley: Los

Laureles Grade resident reported hearing a band playing at Bernardus Lodge. The music was shut off prior to arrival.

Carmel Valley: Woman reported seeing a model rocket launched from the Carmel Valley Airport and crash in the area of the Acacia Lodge. She felt it could have been the cause of the down power lines, which also caused a small fire in the same area.

TUESDAY, MAY 22

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a whale possibly in distress near the sandbar on the beach. Area checked. No indication of any marine life in trouble.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a gas leaf blower being used at Casanova and Palou. Discovered a gardener using a gas hedge trimmer. No violation.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: BOL for a fraudulent check suspect. Suspect described as male adult with black top and tan pants. Area check was negative.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: 911 call received from a Mission resident who advised a male subject was being mean to her. She then advised he was leaving and that she didn't need any help.

She requested an officer not respond to her apartment. Responded in order to check her welfare and verify she was not under duress. Upon arrival, no one answered the front door. She was found outside trying to avoid officers. She did not want to discuss anything. Premises checked and she was not in danger. No injuries. She was requested to call if there was a legitimate emergency.
